DETAILED ACTION

1. This communication is in response to the Application filed 20 July 2001. Claims 1-24 have been examined in this case.

Specification

2. The specification has not been checked to the extent necessary to determine the presence of all possible minor errors. Applicant's cooperation is requested in correcting any errors of which applicant may become aware in the specification.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

3. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

4. Claims 1-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

5. The basis of this rejection is set forth in a two-prong test of:

- (1) whether the invention is within the technological arts; and
- (2) whether the invention produces a useful, concrete, and tangible result.

6. For a claimed invention to be statutory, the claimed invention must be within the technological arts. Mere ideas in the abstract (i.e., abstract idea, law of nature, natural phenomena) that do not apply, involve, use, or advance the technological arts fail to promote the "progress of science and the useful arts" (i.e., the physical sciences as opposed to social sciences, for example) and therefore are found to be non-statutory subject matter. For a process claim to pass muster, the recited process must somehow apply, involve, use, or advance the technological arts.

Art Unit: 3621

7. In the present case, independent claims 1 and 11 only recite an abstract idea. The recited steps of merely receiving pet death care products, services and information comprising: receiving pet death care products, services and information from a supplier of pet death care products, services and information, or of making such products available to a preferred provider; and as a preferred provider, dispensing the pet death care products, services and information to pet owners do not apply, involve, use, or advance the technological arts since all of the recited steps can be performed in the mind of the user or by use of a pencil and paper, or by a person on foot, for example. These steps only constitute an idea of receiving pet death care products and information. No technological arts are recited in the instant claims or any other claim in this application. As to technological arts recited in the specification, mere recitation in the specification (i.e., intended or field of use) or mere implication of employing a machine or computer or computer network to perform some or all of the recited steps does not confer statutory subject matter to an otherwise abstract idea unless there is positive recitation in the claim as a whole to breathe life and meaning into the specification. In the present case, none of the recited steps are directed to anything in the technological arts as explained above with the exception of the recitation in the specification that the method involves the use of the "World Wide Web".

8. Further, the dependent (2-10 and 12-24) claims merely give examples of "preferred providers" such as veterinarians or pet shops. Looking at the claims as a whole, nothing claim 1 or 12 any other claim in this application recites any structure or functionality to suggest that a computer or computer network performs the recited steps.

Therefore, the specification is taken to merely recite a field of use.

9. Additionally, for a claimed invention to be statutory, the claimed invention must produce a useful, concrete, and tangible result. In the present case, the claimed invention produces the distribution of products and services for pet owners (i.e., useful and tangible).

10. Although the recited process produces a useful, concrete, and tangible result, since the claimed invention, as a whole, is not within the technological arts as explained above, claims 1-24 are deemed to be directed to non-statutory subject matter.
